1. St. Bernards are big, powerful dogs. They have a thick, brown, and white coat (毛皮). They are friendly to humans and are popular family pets today. Yet, a very long time ago, they were not just pets. In fact, they saved thousands of lives over the centuries. One St. Bernard named Barry rescued (救援) over 40 people during its lifetime.

The St. Bernards' history of saving people's lives dates back to three hundred years ago. At that time, they were simple guard dogs living with the monks (僧侶) at the snowy Great St. Bernard Pass, a dangerous mountain road between Switzerland and Italy. The weather was often terrible in the area, so many travelers got lost there. Therefore, the monks trained the dogs to smell and find lost travelers in the mountains. St. Bernards would work in teams. When they found a lost traveler, one returned and led the monks to the lost traveler. The others would lie on the traveler to keep the traveler warm and lick the person's face to try to keep him or her awake.

Today, modern roads allow people to drive safely over the mountains, and St. Bernards are no longer used for rescues. However, the amazing history of these dogs attracts thousands of visitors to the Great St. Bernard Pass every year.
