四、閱讀測驗(共 0 分,每題 0 分)

1. In 1967, the United States' space program had its first big accident. Three astronauts died in the fire. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) began a new program to help stop future fires and decided to make a mascot. It found the perfect choice in Snoopy, a very popular dog in the comic Peanuts. The dog loved the idea of flying and dreamed of going to space. Now, astronauts usually touch the huge toy, Snoopy, for good luck before they leave the Earth. They also wear Snoopy pin on the uniform and put a small Snoopy toy in their pocket to help them remember to be safe. Interestingly, in the comic stories, Snoopy and his flying dog house did land on the moon four months before the first astronauts in 1969.

2. In 2017, the 29th Summer Universiade was held in Taipei. At a Universiade, teams of college students from many countries play against each other. Every Universiade had its special mascot. This time, it was a bear called Bravo.

The bear was a Formosan black bear, which has a V-shaped white mark on its body. The name “Bravo” means “well done” or “good job.” The mascot helped cheer on the teams by using the word bravo. The V sign stand for “victory,” which means “winning” in English.

The Universiade was very successful and Bravo the Bear became famous and popular with so many people. Mascots usually finish their work when a Universiade finishes. However, people loved Bravo so much that they wanted him to stay. As a result, it became the mascot of Taipei City.

Because the number of Formosan black bears is decreasing, Bravo has also helped people pay more attention to the serious problem. Now more and more Taiwanese notice the poor animal and try to help it. Next time, when you see Bravo in the news, remember that Formosan black bears need you, too!
