1. Normally, it is believed that a close friend is the best when it comes to having someone around to support us. That is, people think one or two true friends in times of difficulty can be more helpful than a large group of people who are not so close. However, every person has different ideas about friendship. Some only feel the need for one very close friend; others like to have more than one person with whom they can talk about their problems. In fact, the best is to have a group of really good friends, who are always ready to help out when you are in difficulty.

There are two main reasons why you should have several good friends. First, different friends can offer different kinds of support. Some friends are good listeners. Other friends are good at giving advice. Still others can make you happy when you're feeling down. Some people may say, "I don't need a lot of friends. I have a friend who is smart and funny." That's fine, but what if that friend can't be there for you when you're in trouble? You might feel alone just and maybe more upset.

Also, having a group of friends helps bring together those who can do different things, and they can share their talents with each other. For example, the Outgoing people encourage the shy friends, and the good listeners can learn how to give advice from the smart friends. Everyone feels they are important because they can give help in one way or another. This is something that acquaintances (點頭之交) give.

2. Charlotte's Web was written by an American writer, E. B. White. It is about the friendship between a pig and a spider. In the story, a farm girl, Fern Arable, rescued a tiny piglet. She named him Wilbur and took care of him with love. However, when Wilbur grew into an adult pig, he was sent to a farm which was owned by Fern's uncle, Homer Zuckerman. Wilbur then started to live in the barn with other farm animals.

Although Fern visited Wilbur once in a while, Wilbur still felt very lonely. Seeing Wilbur getting upset, a friendly spider named Charlotte told him that she would be his friend. Wilbur was very delighted, and he and Charlotte became good friends. When Charlotte learned that Wilbur's fate was to end up on the Zuckermans' dinner table at Christmas, she came up with a plan to save him. She spun her webs with words like "radiant" and "humble" to spell out what a special pig Wilbur was. This made people take notice of Wilbur, and he even won an award at the county fair.
